

JAYANT TRIPATHI
ADVOCATE

My formal association with Mr. Jain began in 2001, when he was Central Government Standing Counsel in the Delhi High Court. Even though I went into independent practice in 2004, Mr. Jain continued, and continues till this day, to be "friend, philosopher and guide".

The interesting thing is that the chamber juniors from before my time, and after me, all form a part of a family that is close, and who help each other whenever required - one of the many lessons learnt from "Sir", who has helped each and every junior in time of need.

I cannot even begin to list out the other lessons I learnt from him, the most important being the ability to keep cool in Court when under fire; the importance of being thoroughly prepared with the brief; the importance of keeping quiet when needed; utter honesty in dealing with Court and clients, and so many more.

But the most important lesson perhaps is to keep smiling, as Mr. Jain always does.

Here's hoping that your smile stays the same as you ascend to greater heights!

Yours Sincerely,

(Jayant Tripathi)
